

Improved Patient Care

With staffing shortages and shorter hospital stays, the demands on nurses and caregivers are increasing. It can also enable patients to make non-clinical requests such as ordering meals, scheduling a case worker or spiritual counselor visit or even requesting blankets, pillows or other items using their television. Relief from these non-clinical calls allows caregivers to focus on providing quality care, maximizes the productivity of the nursing staff and facilitates timely attention to priority clinical issues.

In addition, LodgeNetRX can be used to deliver patient education programs without a cumbersome VCR cart or video library. The LodgeNetRX system can allow patients to view quality educational programs on their in-room television as desired, or educational programs can be prescribed for their medical condition.

The system can even record the patient's participation in the training and provide reporting that meets the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO) requirements to confirm patient viewing and comprehension of the educational program.

Because patients can use the system for a wide range of non-clinical needs, there is less inclination for them to leave their beds or rooms, which in turn can help reduce the risk healthcare facilities face associated with patient falls.
